

CASE STUDY

From the hills to the big city

Brindley, hailing from Perth Hills, finds joy in walks, playing Xbox, listening to music, and spending time with friends. He attended High School and embarked on a TAFE pre-apprenticeship journey. However, he encountered mental health obstacles and was diagnosed with Schizoaffective Bipolar Type.

Upon exploring job opportunities, Brindley connected with Maxima Disability Employment Services, which eventually led him to HDNWA. Following a screening interview with HDNWA, they supported Brindley in securing an interview with RAC Arena.

The process of interviewing with RAC Arena was clearly explained, alleviating his nervousness, and the one-on-one interview boosted his confidence.

Following a positive interview experience, Brindley commenced his employment journey with HDNWA and RAC Arena. He underwent onboarding, induction, and training processes. Brindley's feedback proved valuable in enhancing procedures for future new employees.

Thriving in the hospitality and tourism industry, Brindley feels supported and valued by his team. His employers create an inclusive and supportive environment, fostering collaboration. Brindley finds his job fulfilling and recommends individuals on similar paths to explore opportunities in tourism and hospitality, highlighting the available support for their success.

Moreover, he advocates for businesses to consider hiring individuals with disabilities, affirming that with the right support, it can be a successful endeavour.
